

Art History Teacher

Position Description

We are seeking a part-time Art History teacher to teach the following courses during the 2026-2027 school year:

- 19th Century Art History (5-week course)
- 20th Century Art History (5-week course)
- Advanced Interdisciplinary Seminar in Museum Studies (10-week course)

Miss Porter's uses a modular-block schedule where full credit courses are taught intensively within a trimester. Each of the courses above would meet for 90 minutes per day during the weeks in which it was offered. They would not be offered at the same time, so candidates can expect to teach one block per day for 20 weeks of the school year. The 19th and 20th century courses are standard survey courses and the Museum Studies is meant to be both interdisciplinary and experiential and will entail visits to local and regional museums and interaction with professionals in the field.

Prospective teaching candidates should have expertise in their field and the ability to teach in an interdisciplinary setting. Our faculty works together within and across departments to build curriculum and design assessments that are aligned both horizontally and vertically to provide students with a holistic and cohesive learning experience. Miss Porter's is not a school where people teach and design curriculum in isolation from their colleagues. Genuine collaboration is a must. Candidates should be adept at managing a dynamic, student-centered classroom. They must also be skilled in curriculum design and familiar with project-based learning, authentic assessment, mastery learning, and standards-based grading. Perhaps most importantly, candidates must have a high degree of cross-cultural competency and be committed to diversity, equity, and inclusion in all aspects of school life. Our teachers work to create equitable classrooms in which students have equal access to opportunities to learn and reach their fullest potential. We are a mission-driven school, and our faculty are particularly committed to uplifting the voices of young women.

Interested candidates should send a resume and cover letter to:
